

Requirements for Submission of Manuscripts to Research Digest

The Research Digest will accept unpublished research papers and articles related to forensic psychophysiology and the polygraph. It will also reprint with permission certain papers and articles related to polygraph that are published in journals not usually visited by polygraph examiners.

Manuscripts must be submitted in the English language.

Manuscripts must be submitted using the American Psychological Association (APA) style, (see Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association). However, the Vancouver Reference style also known as the Author-Number System using Arabic numerals will also be accepted with the exception that the references will reflect the date of publication in parenthesis immediately after the name of the author(s) instead of the end of the reference.

Research studies and articles must be submitted as attachments to electronic mail in final printed format. Research studies must contain an Abstract and be in conformance with the APA Publication Manual or the Vancouver Reference Style Guide.

The length of research papers and articles should not exceed ten thousand words, but exceptions will be made at the discretion of the Editor.

All papers submitted for publication in Research Digest are evaluated by at least two referees within a peer-review process in which the Editor renders the final decision regarding publication.

All papers other than reprints will become the copyright property of the International Society of Polygraph Examiners upon publication, but authors will not be prohibited from posting their paper on their website.
